

SNE

5. A quip; a shuffling answer.
Come, leave your snatches, and yield me a direct answer.
Shakel. Measure for Measure.
SNA'TCHER. n. f. [from snatch.] One that snatches, or takes any thing in haste.
They of those marches Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.
—We do not mean the courting snatchers only,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot. Shakel. H. V.
SNA'TCHINGLY. adv. [from snatching.] Hastily; with interruption.
To SNEAK. v. n. [from snack, Saxon; snige, Danish.]
1. To creep sily; to come or go as if afraid to be seen.
Once the eagle, England, being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weazel, Scot,
Comes snaking, and so sucks her princely eggs. Shakespeare.
Snack not away, fir; for the friar and you Must have a word anon: lay hold on him. Shakespeare.
Discover'd, and defeated of your prey,
You skulk'd behind the fence, and snack'd away. Dryden.
I ought not to turn my back, and to snack off in silence, and leave the truth to lie baffled, bleeding, and slain. Watts.
He snack'd into the grave,
A monarch's half and half a harlot's slave. Dunciad.
Are you all ready? Here's your music here:
Author, snack off; we'll tickle you, my dear. Moore.
2. To behave with meanness and surliness; to crouch; to truckle.
I need salute no great man's threshold, snack to none of his friends to speak a good word for me to my conscience. South.
Nothing can support minds drooping and snacking, and inwardly reproaching them, from a sense of their own guilt, but to see others as bad. South's Sermons.
When int'rest calls off all her snacking train,
When all th' oblig'd desert, and all the vain,
She waits, or to the scaffold, or the cell,
When the last ling'ring friend has bid farewell. Pope.
Tom fruts a soldier, open, bold, and brave;
Will snacks a scurvy'ner, an exceeding knave. Pope.
SNE'AKER. n. f. A large vessel of drink.
I have just left the right worshipful and his myrmidons about a snacker of five gallons. Spectator.
SNE'AKING. participial adj. [from snack.]
1. Servile; mean; low.
2. Covetous; niggardly; meanly parcimonious.
SNE'AKINGLY. adv. [from snacking.] Meanly; servilely.
Do all things like a man, not snackingly:
Think the king fees thee still. Herbert.
While you snackingly submit,
And beg our pardon at our feet,
Discourag'd by your guilty fears
To hope for quarter for your ears. Hudibras.
SNE'AKUP. n. f. [from snack.] A cowardly, creeping, insidious scoundrel. Obsolete.
The prince is a jack, a snackup; and, if he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so. Shak. H. IV.
To SNEAP. v. a. [This word seems a corruption of snip, or of snap, to reprimand. Perhaps snap is in that sense from snit, snibbe, Danish.
Men shold him snibbe bitterly. Chaucer.
1. To reprimand; to check.
2. To nip.
What may
Breed upon our absence, may there blow
No snapping winds at home. Shakespeare.
SNEAP. n. f. [from the verb.] A reprimand; a check.
My lord, I will not undergo this snapp without reply: you call honourable boldness impudent sauciness: if a man will court'ly and say nothing, he is virtuous. Shakel. Henry IV.
To SNEB. v. a. [Properly to snib. See SNEAP.] To check;
to chide; to reprimand.
Which made this foolish briar wax so bold,
That on a time he cast him to scold,
And snibbe the good oak, for he was old. Spenser.
To SNEER. v. n. [This word is apparently of the same family with snare and snort.]
1. To show contempt by looks: nosse sustendere aduice.
2. To insinuate contempt by covert expressions.
The wolf was by, and the fox in a snearing way advised him not to irritate a prince against his subjects. L'Estrange.
I could be content to be a little snear'd at in a line, for the sake of the pleasure I should have in reading the rest. Pope.
If there has been any thing express'd with too much fever-city, it will fall upon those snearing or daring writers of the age against religion, who have left reason and decency. Watts.
3. To utter with grimace.
I have not been snearing fulsome lies, and nauseous flattery, at a little tawdry whore. Congreve.
4. To show awkward mirth.
I had no power over one muscle in their faces, though they snear'd at every word spoken by each other. Taylor.

SNI

- SNEER. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A look of contemptuous ridicule.
Did not the snearer of more impartial men
At sense and virtue, balance all agen. Pope.
2. An expression of ludicrous scorn.
Socrates or Cæsar might have a fool's coat clapt upon them, and in this disguise neither the wisdom of the one nor the majesty of the other could secure them from a snearer. Watts.
To SNEEZE. v. n. [from sniezen, Saxon; niezen, Dutch.] To emit wind audibly by the nose.
If one be about to snuzzle, rubbing the eyes 'till tears run will prevent it; for that the humour descending to the nostrils is diverted to the eyes. Bacon.
If the pain be more intense and deeper within amongst the membranes, there will be an itching in the palate and nostrils, with frequent snuzzing. Wise man's Surgery.
To thee Cupid snuzz'd aloud;
And every lucky omen sent before,
To meet thee landing on the Spartan shore. Dryden.
If any thing oppresses the head, it hath a power to free itself by snuzzing. Ray on the Creation.
Violent snuzzing produceth convulsions in all the muscles of respiration: so great an alteration can be produced only by the tickling of a feather; and if the action of snuzzing should be continued by some very acrid substance, it will produce head-ach, universal convulsions, fever, and death. Arbutnot.
An officer put the sharp end of his half-pike a good way up into my nostril, which tickled my nose like a straw, and made me snuzzle violently. Gulliver's Travels.
SNEEZE. n. f. [from the verb.] Emission of wind audibly by the nose.
I heard the rack
As earth and sky would mingle; but These flaws, though mortals fear them
As dangerous to the pillar'd frame of heav'n,
Are to the main as wholesome as a snuzzle
To man's less universe, and soon are gone. Milt. Par. Reg.
We read in Godignus, that upon a snuzzle of the emperor of Monomotapa, there past exclamations successively through the city. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
SNE'EZEWORD. n. f. [from sniezen, Latin.] A plant.
It hath radiated flowers, whose disk consists of many florets;
but the borders are composed of half florets: the embryos are lodged in the flowercup, which is scaly, each of which becomes one slender feed. Miller.
SNET. n. f. [Among hunters.] The fat of a deer. Di.
SNEW. The old preterite of To snow. Di.
To SNIB. v. a. [from snibbe, Danish. See SNEAP.] To check; to nip; to reprimand.
Asked for their past by every squib,
That list at will them to revile or snib. Hudibras's Tale.
SNICK and SNEE. n. f. A combat with knives.
Among the Dunkirkers, where snick and snee was in fashion, a boatswain with some of our men drinking together, became quarrelsome: one of our men beat him down; then kneeling upon his breast, he drew out a knife, sticking in his side, and cut him from the ear towards the mouth. Wise man's Surgery.
To SNICKER, or SNIGGER. v. n. To laugh sily, wantonly, or contemptuously; to laugh in one's sleeve. Di.
To SNIFF. v. n. [from sniffa, Swedish.] To draw breath audibly up
the nose.
So then you look'd scornful, and snift at the dean,
As, who should say, now am I skinny and lean? Swift.
To SNI'GLE. v. n.
Sniggling is thus performed: in a warm day, when the water is lowest, take a strong small hook, tied to a string about a yard long; and then into one of the holes, where an eel may hide herself, with the help of a short stick put in your bait leisurely, and as far as you may conveniently: if within the fight of it, the eel will bite instantly, and as certainly gorge it: pull him out by degrees. Watson's Angler.
To SNIP. v. a. [from snippen, Dutch.] To cut at once with scissors.
The sinus should be laid open, which was snift up about two inches with a pair of probe-scissors, and the incised lips dressed. Wise man's Surgery.
When tradesmen brought extravagant bills, fir Roger used to bargain to cut off a quarter of a yard: he wore a pair of scissors for this purpose, and would snip it off nicely. Arbutnot.
Putting one blade of the scissors up the gut, and the other up the wound, snip the whole length of the fistula. Sharp.
SNIP. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A single cut with scissors.
What! this a sleeve?
Here's snip and nip, and cut, and snit and snit,
Like to a censor in a barber's shop. Shakespeare.
The ulcer would not cure farther than it was laid open;
therefore with one snip more I laid it open to the very end. Wise.
2. A small thread.
Those we keep within compass by small snips of emphasis, hoping to defend the parts about; but, in spite of all, they will spread farther. Wise man's Surgery.
3. A

SNO

3. A share; a snack. A low word.
He found his friend upon the mending hand, which he was glad to hear, because of the snip that he himself expected upon the dividend. L'Estrange.
SNIPE. n. f. [from snippe, German; snite, Saxon; snit, Welsh.]
1. A small fen fowl with a long bill.
The external evident causes of the atra bilis are a high fermenting diet; as old cheese, birds feeding in fens, as geese, ducks, woodcocks, snipes, and swans. Floyer.
2. A fool; a blockhead.
Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;
For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,
If I should time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. Shakel. Othello.
SNI'PPER. n. f. [from snip.] One that snips.
SNI'PPET. n. f. [from snip.] A small part; a share.
Witches simpling, and on gibbets
Cutting from malefactors snippets;
Or from the pill'ry tips of ears. Hudibras.
SNI'PSNAP. n. f. [A cant word formed by reduplication of snip.]
Tart dialogue.
Dennis and dissonance, and captious art,
And snipsnap short, and interruption smart. Pope's Dunciad.
SNITE. n. f. [from snite, Saxon.] A snipe. This is perhaps the true name; but snipe prevails.
Of tame birds Cornwal hath doves, geese, and ducks: of wild, quail, rail, snite, and wood-dove. Carew.
To SNITE. v. a. [from snite, Saxon.] To blow the nose.
Nor would any one be able to snite his nose, or to snuzzle;
in both which the passage of the breath through the mouth, being intercepted by the tongue, is forced to go through the nose. Grew's Cosmol.
SNIVEL. n. f. [from snivel, German.] Snot; the running of the nose.
To SNIVEL. v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To run at the nose.
2. To cry as children.
Funeral tears are hired out as mourning cloaks; and whether we go to our graves sniveling or singing, 'tis all mere form. L'Estrange.
Away goes he sniveling and yelping, that he had dropt his ax into the water. L'Estrange.
SNIVELLER. n. f. [from snivel.] A weeper; a weak lamenter.
He'd more lament when I was dead,
Than all the snivellers round my bed. Swift.
To SNORE. v. n. [from snorren, Dutch.] To breathe hard through the nose, as men in sleep.
I did unreverently blame the gods,
Who wake for thee, though thou snore for thyself. B. John.
Whose railing heroes, and whose wounded gods,
Makes some suspect he snores as well as nods. Rowland.
He may lie quietly in his shades, and snore on to doomsday for me; unless I see farther reason of disturbing his repose. Stillingfleet.
Is not yonder Proteus' cave?
It is; and in it lies the god asleep;
And snoring by
We may decry
The monsters of the deep. Dryden's Albion.
'Twas Acme's and Septimius' life;
The lady sigh'd, the lover snor'd. Prior.
The giant, gorg'd with flesh, and wine, and blood,
Lay stretcht at length, and snoring in his den,
Belching raw gobbets from his maw, o'ercharg'd
With purple wine and cruddl'd gore confus'd. Addison.
SNORE. n. f. [from snorja, Saxon; from the verb.] Audible respiration of sleepers through the nose.
The surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I've drugg'd their pockets.
Shakespeare's Macbeth.
To SNORT. v. n. [from snorcken, Dutch.] To blow through the nose as a high meted horse.
The snoring of his horses was heard. Jer. viii. 16.
The fiery war-horse paws the ground,
And snorts and trembles at the trumpet's sound. Addison.
From their full racks the gen'rous steeds retire,
Dropping ambrosial foams and snorting fire. Addison's Ovid.
He with wide nostrils, snorting, skims the wave. Thomson.
SNOT. n. f. [from snote, Saxon; snut, Dutch.] The mucus of
the nose.
Thus, when a greedy sloven once has thrown
His snut into the melf, 'tis all his own. Swift.
SNOTTY. adj. [from snut.] Full of snot.
This quire South my husband took in a dirty snotty-nosed boy. Arbutnot.
SNOUT. n. f. [from snout, Dutch.]
1. The nose of a beast.
His nose in the air, his snout in the skies.
In shape a beagle's whelp throughout,
With broader forehead, and a sharper snout. Dryden.

SNU

2. The nose of a man, in contempt.
Her subtle snout
Did quickly wind his meaning out. Hudibras.
But when the date of Nock was out,
Off dropt the sympathetick snout. Hudibras.
What Ethiop lips he has,
How foul a snout, and what a hanging face! Dryd. Juven.
Charm'd with his eyes, and chin, and snout,
Her pocket-glass drew sily out;
And grew enamour'd with her phiz,
As just the counterpart of his. Swift.
1. The nosel or end of any hollow pipe.
SNU'UTED. adj. [from snout.] Having a snout.
Snouted and tailed like a boar, and footed like a goat. Grew.
SNOW. n. f. [from snaw, Saxon; snie, Dutch.] The small particles of water frozen before they unite into drops. Locke.
Benaiah slew a lion in a pit, in time of snaw. 2 Sa. xxiii.
Drought and heat consume snaw waters. Job xxiv. 19.
He gives the Winter's snaw her airy birth,
And bids her virgin fleeces clothe the earth. Sandys.
To SNOW. v. n. [from snapan, Saxon; snuewen, Dutch.] To have snow fall.
To SNOW. v. a. To scatter like snow.
If thou be't born to see strange lights,
Ride ten thousand days and nights,
'Till age snaw white hairs on thee. Donne.
SNO'WBALL. n. f. [from snaw and ball.] A round lump of con-gelated snow.
They passed to the east-riding of Yorkshire, their company daily increasing, like a snawball in rolling. Hayward.
His bulky folly gathers as it goes,
And, rolling o'er you, like a snawball grows. Dryden.
A snawball having the power to produce in us the ideas of white, cold, and round, the powers, as they are in the snaw- balls, I call qualities; and as they are sensations in our understandings, ideas. Locke.
SNO'WBROTH. n. f. [from snaw and broth.] Very cold liquor.
Angelo, a man whole blood
Is very snawbroth, one who never feels
The wanton flings and motions of the sense. Shakespeare.
SNO'WDROP. n. f. [from snaw and drop, Latin.] An early flower.
The flower is, for the most part, composed of six leaves, in form of a lily, which are sometimes equal, and sometimes unequal and pendulous: the empalement becomes a roundish fruit, which is divided into three cells, and full of roundish seeds: to which may be added, it hath a bulbous root. Miller.
When we tried the experiment with the leaves of those purely white flowers that appear about the end of Winter, called snawdrops, the event was not much unlike that newly mentioned. Boyle on Colours.
The little shape, by magic pow'r,
Grew less and less, contracted to a flow'r;
A flow'r, that first in this sweet garden smil'd,
To virgins sacred, and the snawdrop styl'd. Tickell.
SNOW-WHITE. adj. [from snaw and white.] White as snow.
A snaw-white bull shall on your shore be slain;
His offer'd entrails cast into the main. Dryden's Æn.
SNO'WY. adj. [from snaw.]
1. White like snow.
So shews a snaw dove trooping with crows,
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shews. Shakespeare.
Now I see thy jolly train:
Snaw headed Winter leads,
Spring and Summer next succeeds;
Yellow Autumn brings the year;
Thou art father of the year.
The blushing ruby on her snaw breast,
Render'd its panting whiteness more confest. Prior.
2. Abounding with snow.
These first in Crete
And Ida known; thence on the snaw top Of cold Olympus rul'd the middle air. Milton's Par. Lost.
As when the Tartar from his Russian foe,
By Afracan, over the snaw plains,
Retires. Milton's Paradise Lost.
SNUB. n. f. [from snubbe, Dutch, a nose, or knube, a joint of the finger.] A jag; a snag; a knot in wood.
Lifting up his dreadful club on high,
All arm'd with ragged snubs and knotty grain,
Him thought at first encounter to have slain. Fairy Queen.
